* Primary image editing tools: You can crop, rotate, convert to color, adjust color, lighten, darken, and sharpen. * Filters: Adjust the color of an image, apply effects, or add lens effects to make an image stand out. The Camera, Lens, and Lens Corrections filters adjust for light and color changes. * Effects: Add graphic design or special text that changes the look of an image. * Image-editing functions: Type faces, change color of hair and eyes, straighten, and add special effects like grunge. * Video functions: Create videos and add special effects. * Video support: Edit video and export to video. You can also convert video to various formats. Photoshop is an expensive application, but if you buy a copy, you are given lifetime access and a license is good forever. If you are a student or member of a non-profit, you can purchase a student or member version at a discounted price. The initial sale price for Photoshop with upgrades is $599 and sometimes $799. Adobe Creative Cloud contains updates to the software for users who pay for the subscription, including those who use new features in versions of Photoshop. For more information on Photoshop use, check out ## Corel Paint Shop Pro Corel Paint Shop Pro (CPSP) is designed for beginners in graphics. It works with a rather old-fashioned paintbrush style, much like Photoshop and GIMP, but it's fairly easy to use. You can use the program to edit raster images, but it cannot open or create vector art. You can create layers, add and remove layers, and make adjustments to layers. For the most part, there is a limited degree of freedom, but it's possible to add and modify all sorts of things.

What happened next was panic. The networks picked up the story, the mass media rushed to print the story, but by the time the dust had settled more than two and a half years later, the entire Internet was buzzing with evidence, and more than a few people were pretty sure that they had seen a UFO. Here's how it all went down. The night before, a network camera in the Florida Everglades had picked up a strange rock and is now known to have recorded a fascinating split second of time in which a bright object slid around to point directly over the cam, briefly creating a visible corridor on the lens' film. To most people in the immediate area, though, it was just a cool piece of footage of an alligator or a raccoon. But the more people paid attention, the more they realized they had seen something that was highly unusual. What made the footage most eerie, however, was not the fact that a bright orb had literally appeared and vanished in front of the lens, but that another, identical orb had appeared directly above the first, casting a glowing trail of its own through the trees. The writer Jeremy Baum and a researcher named John F. Schuessler discovered the footage on their night-vision cameras on July 22, 2000. They watched the two orbs appear above the cameras and vanished without a sound. The following morning, the pair took a closer look at the original video footage and came to a startling conclusion: The lights appeared at exactly the same time for both images. After some more close inspection, Baum and Schuessler determined that the flickerings were in the shape of a UFO and that the two objects had entered the frame exactly 15.5 seconds apart. Baum contacted the network that had broadcast the footage the previous night and asked them to send a representative to take another look at it. All he got was a form letter thanking him for his opinion and offering to send him a copy of the story that the network had eventually run. Frustrated, Baum and Schuessler decided to catch up with their respective bosses the following day, where they saw that their footage was running on the same news programs as the story from the previous night. At that point, Baum, who'd worked for five years as a programmer at NBC, decided to go public with the footage. He wrote a letter to the network executives that night, attaching the clip, and also contacted the writer of

"And you wouldn't want to know." "So, the thing is, we'd like to be able to trust you, but we can't." "So we're gonna have to trust that we have the same goals." "The only goal I have is to bring Alan and his daughter back safely." "I suggest you give that some thought." "What are you doing here?" "I'll explain." "Your mother is just stopping by for one day." "No, you'll stay, she'll go, and this'll never happen again." "I'm not playing this game." "Yes, you are." "If you leave now, you and your mother will be dead in three days." "Your mom can still come back." "Mmm-mmm." "No, she's staying." "You're not." "I've spoken to the authorities." "They're not gonna come to bail you out, and even if they did, they're not coming for you." "You are coming back." "If you don't," "I'll come back, I'll find you, and I will kill you." "Do you understand?" "I will kill you." "Mom!" "What am I supposed to do?" "What are we gonna do?" "Tell me." "We gotta go get my mother." "I'll tell you what." "We'll go get her, then I will kill you." "Do you understand?" "I'll kill you." "I'll kill you if you go." "I'll kill you." "So you'll keep your mouth shut, but you're gonna let the girl go free?" "Gee, thanks." "It was your idea." "No, it was your idea." "Gee, I'm really sorry." "Yeah, you are." "I am." "You know, I'm not stupid." "I know you're not." "I'm not stupid." "I knew it." "I knew it." "I knew it." "You're not stupid." "Oh, my God." "You really are not." "No." "You're not stupid." "You're not stupid." "You're not stupid." "What's gonna happen now?" "I have an idea." "We're gonna have a little contest." "This is gonna be a contest?" "Yes." "And the winner will be... the lady who can eat the most potato chips." "Are you serious?" "Yes." "Who
