"To be a true bulwark of human rights in Asia, we need to promote a strong legal system," he said at the time. But even if we adopt such a system, he said, "…no legal system can protect human rights if it does not have a strong legal basis". Nishikido was referring to Article 5 of the San Francisco-based non-profit Human Rights in China. The article explicitly mentions Hong Kong as the sole exception to China's claim to a "one country, two systems" arrangement, and calls upon "China and all other parties, including Hong Kong and Macau" to treat the region's autonomy as "an inalienable part" of its "socialist system with Chinese characteristics". The article's author, Li Zehou, is a Chinese legal scholar who spent five years as a visiting scholar at the University of Toronto. His view of the relationship between human rights and the rule of law is well informed and would make a
