Cisplatin/interleukin-2 immunotherapy of murine lymphomas: modulation of cytokine production by tumor infiltrating cells. The generation of IL-2-dependent cytotoxic T lymphocytes (CTL) capable of selectively killing IL-2-dependent murine lymphoma cells in vitro has been reported. It was found that IL-2-dependent cytotoxicity was mediated by a population of effector cells within the spleen and draining lymph node of mice bearing intradermal tumors. The cytotoxic cell population was characterized as CD3+, CD8+, and were Lyt-2+. Furthermore, we report that, within the tumor-infiltrating effector cell population, the majority of the cells produced granulocyte-macrophage colony-stimulating factor (GM-CSF) and interferon-gamma (IFN-gamma) and these cells were predominantly CD4+. More strikingly, we also found that a low level of IL-2 is present in the tumor tissue. It was inferred that, within the tumor, the levels of IL-2 are very low or no longer detectable and that therefore IL-2 production may, at least in part, be from CD4+ tumor-infiltrating cells, which are unable to produce IL-2 spontaneously.Q: How to place an image with ViewPager in the middle of the screen?
