A Haunting : Witching Hour is a storytelling VR/Non VR Experience of dark horror and desperate survival. An immersive experience finds players discovering – and taking part in – a rich story that explores the dark corners of human nature. It will unfold in episodes, giving players the opportunity to continue to unravel a complex mystery through downloadable content that picks up where the previous episode’s cliffhanger left off. The little town of Shady Hollow is known for dark legends of centuries past. The most famous of these is the legend of the Hollow Creek Witch. Some believe she is a legend, others believe something else. However, everyone will discover that there may be more truth than fiction to the legend of the Hollow Creek Witch--and something darker than death itself. Backstory: It was in 1695 when Elizabeth Ainsley was accused of being a witch. She was betrayed by the one person she cared for the most, Rev James Beaumont. Little did he know the terror he was about to unleash upon the small town of Shady Hollow. In the late 1970’s, Cliff Beaumont would resurrect the mining company opened several decades earlier by his father. Several months after reopening the mines, his daughter Sally went missing. For weeks, the town’s people searched the woods and the coal mines but all they would find is a shoe belonging to Sally by the Hollow Creek. Most believed that Sally must have fallen into the creek and drowned while others believed it was the curse of The Hollow Creek Witch. A year later, both Cliff and Linda Beaumont grew ill and soon died. It was rumored that the loss of their daughter was too much for them to handle. John, being the sole remaining member of the Beaumont family, was taken to an orphanage. John spends the rest of his adolescence growing up in an orphanage, until the night shortly after his 18th birthday when he killed several employees at the orphanage and escapes. John is never seen from again after that night. Season One Episodes: About A Haunting : Witching Hour: Season One: The events that occurred that night are still unknown. What's new:

's Villages TAPAS--They are the ones left behind when tourists leave, with their folded tents and children playing in the dust, so they have a kind of quiet strength. They have lived for decades in the villages atop the ancient walls of the Spanish Alpujarras and are fighting for their land, their patrimony. The battle lines are drawn. To the west, the cranes and bulldozers of a massive tourism project, La Conca Bacuna Verde, or "green pond at the lower jaw." It will be the first Alpujarras project with a proven ROI--stand for real obligation--and activists say they won't let it happen. To the east, the bulldozers working in open fields, the smell of summer hay, the howls of hungry sheep. This land has been usurped, bulldozed and sold off to investors. It is in greater danger than those who have lived here for centuries or even for decades. Today, they are campaigning to save at least eight villages under threat. This is no place for tourism. And it won't be possible without intervention by the villagers themselves and their allies, global activists, and the state administration that is the architect of the Campo Mariente (Field of the Sea) development. Between these two camps, in both the villages and the surrounding territory, there are farmers, construction workers, builders, shepherds, adolescents and grandparents, husbands, wives, fathers, mothers. They come from a variety of countries, including the Czech Republic, Romania and Colombia. And they are united by one thing: the need to save the Alpujarras from destruction. "We are not only losing land," says Galician farmer Francisco Miguel, 60. "There is lots of land that is being sold that we will never be able to work or farm." Miguel sounds meek and with little enthusiasm as he walks through his village of Nava de Sos and the adjoining field of San Pedro, the ubiquitous rural photo op. The overuse of the word harags (rush) by the activists is something the activists are learning to live with. His wife Mireia, 50, walks beside him, her eyes down and her face distressed. Her voice shakes at points. The morning before, migrants came at night. They invaded the village of Nava, inhabited by 62 people, seven of whom are minors. He says they asked for a certificate of permanence; they

We Are Open is a game about the joys of shopping. Who doesn't love running around a mall looking for groceries, just to forget what they were looking for in the first place? Brace yourself, because there are many customers waiting to get to the bottom of their shopping lists! Give them a hand, will you? But wait! Who is that other fellow doing YOUR job? It's Shop-O-Tron the AI that swoops all the credit before you can hand in your goods you just found with hard work. Pick up the pace and beat his score before the round ends! In the current state of the game you can find customers walking around a mall, with shopping lists they are willing to share with you. Your job is to find these items scattered around the stores and bring anything you can remember back to them. If you manage to correctly deliver all products to every customer the round ends with your and the bot's score printed out. Can you beat the current high score of your Leaderboard? There is only one map at the moment, but some alterations are made between rounds! There are many groceries to look for, more than you will remember that's for sure! Explore bakeries, butcheries and supermarkets, all with colourful stocks that change every time you start a round! You might remember you went for milk, but wait! Was it

Oat Milk or Goat Milk? Let's just run back and check! Every item is ready to be picked up from the shelves, but if you can't find a prepared product, then feel free to turn on the Oven or the Slicing Machine and make it yourself! Find Power Ups scattered around the map and use wide range of abilities to have a chance to beat your AI rival! Don't worry if you can't find any though! Your trusty robotic arm can extend and shoot its hand, and it's always by your side! To make every round even more difficult, the shops don't stay in their places either! Explore a new layout every time, with randomly spawned shops! Have a nice time shopping, because now We Are Open!

Q: How to create a mesh with an eye socket that has the appearance of a lip? I have tried to figure out how to create a mesh that looks like the image below. I have tried to make the "eye" part as a separate mesh and then added a subdivision modifier on that mesh and added the lip shape in. This did not work
