“We describe Sparta as an arcade bullet hell game. But there is some strategy to it. It has eight maps and in each map you can play with three difficulties. - Easy: Awesome experience with the most guns - Normal: Better than easy, quite a bit of strategy - Hard: What, no easy? We said that this mode would be more hardcore. The concept is similar to Madfinger’s Beat.com, but the difficulty is higher. There are currently 3 game modes, but more to come. - Boss: Monsters are coming out of the walls and ceiling to destroy you! You have to kill the whole horde before it turns, destroying everything in the process. - Free: Just as we named it, beat the levels and see how far you can go. - Deathmatch: Get all your friends together, pair up and die together. In first-person mode, you can move with your head with the mouse, which is quite comfortable. You can also look behind you with the secondary mouse movement. You can also use your VR headset to look around. When you die, the screen is cleared and ready for another run. There are checkpoints after each stage. You can also restart a stage by keeping pressing your back button on the controller. Lots of future things to add and the co-op mode is coming up soon. Thank you for the support!” Steam Store Page Incarnation Year Zero Reviews “Good but ... Incarnation is already a somewhat clunky experience in VR with the limitation of the head tracking. Movement and camera control feels a bit like a game within a game, with some basic movement but nothing in the way of more complex shooting and traversal, at least in the early stages. Similar to Alien Isolation where you’re shooting whilst also moving about and being exposed to alien creatures, you now get the same with VR. Although it does look really well, with good use of the lighting and movement it all can feel a little awkward and clunky. The arcades I have visited over the years are all full of arcade machines that have no downside and are easily the best price-to-value proposition for consumers. But you can’t own every game, and now the market for such games has been opened up it’s time for new and challenging experiences.” “That said, Immersion VR have been getting great reviews from the Vive

What's new in The Raiders:

The Bicyclism EP is the debut EP by the British band Oasis and was released on 9 November 1994. It was released after the band completed the recording of the second single from their debut album Definitely Maybe. Originally published by Creation Records, it was later re-released in 1995 as a seven-track vinyl with five B-sides, and then later as a fourteen-track CD, with nine of the B-sides from the vinyl version of the EP, plus four new tracks. The EP's title track was released as the second single from Definitely Maybe, the band's debut album. The B-sides "Sheila Don't Cry" and "Fade Away" were originally b-sides for "Supersonic". "The Hindu Times" was b-side to "Big Wheel". The final single from the EP, "Walk It Like You Talk It", was released as the B-side to a charity single to raise money for Marie Curie. "D-Boys & Girls" was a B-side for that single. The final track, "Don't Look Back In Anger", was recorded for the Irregular Choice sessions, but was not included on the eventual album. The EP reached number 32 on the UK Albums Chart. The EP has since been re-released several times. In 1995, the EP was released on vinyl along with the band's first two singles; the original seven-track EP was released in a box and a promotional version of the vinyl with the remaining four B-sides from the EP was released. In 2000, an expanded, fourteen-track CD was released, containing the original seven-track EP alongside the nine B-sides from the vinyl version of the EP, including the bonus tracks "LA Woman", "Fade Away" and "Sheila Don't Cry". In 2004, the EP was reissued as part of the Oasis reissues entitled Originals, along with the band's other early singles. Its title track was also re-released on the title track for the album, the song "What's the Story Morning Glory?" was re-recorded and released as part of the Dig Out Your Soul: The Best of Oasis compilation album in 2004, and "D-Boys & Girls" was released on "The Masterplan" compilation. Background and recording After Oasis had signed a record deal with Creation Records, the label conceived a four-track EP, entitled

Free The Raiders

Hey you!! This is my very first title that I created by myself. I made it for my long trip (before I had WT3) back to uni. I made the airport and it's surroundings myself using the historical as source. This is a very high quality game, so expect some of these things: - strong visuals with great eye candy effects - absolutely no bad performance - smooth and fast performance (fps) - no micro-stutters - dead-realistic airport - more to come! Instructions: - Lower your graphics to Low or No AA. - AFK with real life FPS. It's annoying. - Run game on medium - Vsync ON - I recommend checking the hint page first. - You can also use the "Warnings" options to be warned about bad things. - Please don't be a pussy with the controls. Learn to control your aircraft! - There is no way to filter out the warning that are basically puns! - The save function in the hint doesn't work 100% because of the data structures in the thread but you can save in pause menu and load the last save. (Last save is very helpful for when you miss the hint. Yes, it's that annoying.) - If you see a collision, please tell me. I have no idea how to deal with these! - The game loads without any textures or models until you go to the airport at the beginning. - There are only three planes on this Airport at the beginning. - Many of the models have been changed to improve their stats and with AA. - The airport at the beginning is very rudimentary. It's basically an empty runway and some taxiways. - You will see the in-game (used) fuel tanks in the airport as well. - You will see the used fuel tanks for the 747-400 and 777-300ER. - The ground texture is based off of the historical airport. Don't worry if the sky looks different. It's not supposed to. - You can hide the large moving objects with map filters. - There are no water in this game. - There is no budget cuts at all. - The airport and surroundings are mine. - Do not use any mods. - For the airport texture, the airport from the 'Racing' version was used. - Many textures were replaced for better quality. -
