More particularly this invention relates to a method of detecting subterranean formations having narrow dip zones. One of the most important aspects of a well log is to determine the presence or absence of a stratum of a particular characteristic. A poorly defined stratum is not easily resolved into a particular type or cut of formation, which can then be subsequently evaluated for the presence of oil or gas. Some well logs have the capability of making such determinations. Examples of formations which are of Report Inappropriate Content.The $50 billion app-for-the-monthly-utilities-bill industry is booming and will grow even larger in the next decade. Consumers love the fact that it's easy to pay utilities with Apple, Google, and Samsung Pay, and operators like Intrado, X and Just Energy love the fact that their apps for their mobile products are integrated into a fully featured app. The more attractive a mobile app is to consumers the more likely they are to use it and pay with it. But the industry is being rocked by a new startup today that is disrupting this market with a business model that allows app-for-pay services to be free. Started by an industry veteran, Prakash Jangid, WhatUnits is the industry's largest mobile payments app, boasting nearly 10,000 merchants and a customer base of 100 million in 19 countries across Africa, Europe, Middle East and Asia. Jangid has developed a new business model for mobile payments by using artificial intelligence and machine learning to enable retailers to offer merchants a unique way to profit without investing in traditional card systems. The company's mobile platform has been used by merchants to offer in-store and online merchants the ability to offer consumers a unique product that goes beyond the current mobile payments apps. WhatUnits is the first platform for mobile payments to combine usage tracking analytics with machine learning to discover the unique business model. With this model, they're able to offer merchants a free mobile payments app for phones and tablets.
