The calcium/calmodulin-dependent kinase II in the nuclear envelope of rat skeletal muscle cells. Calcium/calmodulin-dependent protein kinase II (CaM kinase II) is a ubiquitously expressed enzyme that phosphorylates nuclear or cytoplasmic proteins, e.g., myosin heavy chain, at multiple, selective amino acid residues. CaM kinase II is present in the sarcolemma and in the nuclear envelope of rat skeletal muscle, where it is associated with the adherens junctions of myotubes. This study was designed to determine whether CaM kinase II is present in the nuclear envelope of rat skeletal muscle cells and, if so, where it is located. We found that the antibody directed against the CaM kinase II catalytic subunit reacted with a major protein of the nuclear envelope in parallel with the myofibril components desmin and alpha-actinin. The CaM kinase II signal in the nuclear envelope did not overlap with that of the three CaM kinase II isoforms (alpha, beta, and gamma), alpha-tubulin, or the alpha-actinin isoform 4, but it was coprecipitated with the beta-actin. Northern blot analyses with RNA isolated from rat skeletal muscle cells indicated that the CaM kinase II alpha-isoform is expressed at a level that was nearly 10-fold lower than that of beta- and gamma-isoforms. Taken together, our findings suggest that the nuclear envelope CaM kinase II probably functions as an anchoring protein for nuclear-envelope-associated proteins in skeletal muscle.Q: Splitting an array into two arrays in Clojure I'm trying to split an array into two new arrays, so that the beginning of the array is in an array called head and the rest of the array goes to the array called tail. My question is, why does the (butterfly tail tail) work, but (butterfly [head tail] tail) gives me an error. (defn butterfly ([x] x) ([x head tail] (let [head (vector x head) tail (vector x tail) new-head (take head (init tail))] (butterfly tail tail))))

It is one of the best ways to experience bugs up close. They come in all shapes and sizes, but the most annoying of all are the flying creatures. They look and feel like little paper pellets with wings that flicker in the dark. As the mom of a child with severe allergies I have come to hate them. Other weird crawling bugs include ladybugs, dragon flies, and even ants. I prefer to deal with the crawling, scurrying and flying bugs as I don't want to get too close to the other creepy crawlies. The Crickets and Grasshoppers are back. Well, not at my house. I know it has been around for quite sometime now. I haven't seen them this year. But maybe I'm just not looking hard enough. Or they have moved to another location. I can see grasshoppers in the yard at the beginning of summer. I think they are infesting the yard because they are eating all of our vegetables. The crickets are much more noisy. I keep hearing crickets chirping around in the evenings,
