What is Photoshop? Adobe Photoshop is probably the most recognized software used for editing images, and it's one of the most expensive. It is used by photographers to manipulate photos, graphic designers for creating new images, and web designers for web and mobile development. It's extremely versatile, and it makes editing and retouching of photos and other graphics extremely easy. But it does have some downsides. It can be very difficult to learn and use. It also has a long learning curve and does not support as many file formats and options as third-party tools. However, these downsides are certainly worth it if you're willing to learn, and to invest some time into customizing how your images look. Most professionals and hobbyists choose to rely on Photoshop for these purposes. Q: How do I change the behaviour of navigating up in a lotus notes document For as long as I have used notes, I have been able to navigate to a previous section using tabs and then hit tab after to move to that section. In the latest version (4.5.3) of lotus notes this has broken and now if I navigate through a large set of section then when it reaches the top I hit tab to get back to what I was looking at before i hit tab. How can I change this behaviour back to where it used to work? Note, I realise I can navigate using direct links such as /Section/Section2. However, doing this is not what I would consider productive as when I reach a set of links it is easy to forget the location of the link I want. A: Navigating to the next section is not broken. I think you are confused about the "tabs". There are "Previous" and "Next" but you can use the same "Tabs". You can navigate between sections by using Bookmarks and it works as you expect. Bookmarks were introduced in version 4.5 and is probably the reason why you can not get back by using "Next" and "Tabs". A: In order to save some confusion I'll explain my initial reaction to your question: 1. Previous and Next Tab have no effect on how you manage your links 2. Bookmarks have no effect on your links 3. Although I can't find it for this exact scenario, and I don't think Notes even recognizes them as an explicit feature, you can page through your document with Notes. From the "Previous" and "Next" tab choices available in the File menu, the choices are: Bookmark Go To (Back) Go To (Forward) Go To (Next) Go To (Previous) There's no way to go to your previous section without a bookmark, or to navigate in a non-sequential fashion, so you're forced to use one of the remaining options. If you can live with the Bookmarks feature, you can use it to navigate your document, and thus, can "correct" your navigation without losing your back buttons. The "Go to a Next Page" option, which is actually generated by the "Next Page" command, is disabled in all
