I first tried to take a few videos through the built-in camera app! I was shocked at how bad the video quality was, and even more shocked that I could only take a maximum of 5 minutes at a time of 15 seconds once per photo! I expect better from an iPhone! You know that you're working with a Full-Resolution preview, the same size as the original, when you hold down the Shift key as you zoom in or out; and if you put your cursor over a photo thumbnail while the Shift key is depressed, the preview swivels around to face the window that's in focus. When you're not working with a Full-Resolution preview, you get merely a 300 percent preview image – that is, the Preview itself moves the frame with you! I tried to download this free app, iPhone Photoshop Express , and after 30 seconds, I was able to choose a couple of locations from the map, but then I found that the app would not let me download photos. This app is therefore totally useless to me! It does however work well for uploading photos, and you can get some free shots – but that's about it. If you wish, you can optimize every image once the Presenter has finished creating the image. This may not seem like a big deal in a photo viewfinder app, but in a file manager, trying to find duplicates of each photo with the same settings can take a lot of time. You can do this by going to the Edit menu and selecting Optimize.
