Русский Windows / полный.Things are heating up in the latest industry forecast, which has now been upgraded for 2018 and beyond. For the first time, CBRE has responded to the rise in industrial and logistics demand that we have seen over the past few years. The company's new Global Market Review (GMR) is being pushed out to clients this week, and it also highlights the very significant changes in the supply chain and logistics market. "We've already seen a significant rise in investment in the industrial and logistics markets over the past 12 months, but with this report we see that growth heading further," said CBRE GMR Advisory Director, Neville White. "Our forecast is that by 2020 the industrial and logistics demand will be driven more by housing than any other component of the New Economy." The report sees the next big boom in growth coming in Europe, followed by North America and China. And the best news of all for occupiers, the supply chains and demand are going to have a lot to do with delivering this growth. The main recommendations from the report are: Opportunity for Building in the CBD and in Industrial Areas and Warehouses The industrial and logistics markets are not just oversupplied but also under-utilised, with potential for
